

Philip Sissons Called 2005

Practice Summary

Philip has a varied practice which covers all areas of property litigation, including both commercial and residential landlord and tenant matters and real property disputes.

He has a particular interest in development disputes, with extensive recent experience of related issues including rights to light, restrictive covenants, easements and the interpretation of conditional agreements for sale/options.

Philip is also experienced in property cases with an insolvency angle, having acted in major litigation arising out of the administration of Lehman Brothers. He regularly advises on and appears in cases involving administration and CVAs as well as matters concerning the property law consequences of insolvency (including bona vacantia, escheat and vesting orders).
